HIS LONG NIGHT WALK.

Northfield Man Tells of Traveling 38 Miles to Fill Engagement.

The Rev. James B. Sargent, who recently accepted a call to the Congregational church in Northfield and who walked 38 miles from Montpelier to Woodsville, N. H., in the dead of night to keep an appointment in his own church, writes most interestingly of his trip. He says:

On Saturday, Sept. 23, 1905, I went from Lisbon to Northfield. I had just accepted a call to the Congregational church at Northfield, and the occasion of my going home on that day was in relation to a future home. The church owns no parsonage and I had been unable to find a rent, so it had been decided that it would be best for me to board for a few weeks while my family were with relatives in Gaylesville, Vt. I wished to obtain a room, a place to board, and a place to store my household goods.

I arrived in Northfield at a little before 1 o'clock, and soon had completed satisfactorily all I wished to accomplish, and was waiting at the station for the mail train. This train was, however, quite late, and did not arrive until some time between 4 and 4:30 o'clock. I had looked up connections at Lisbon in the morning and thought I had ample time to catch the train at Montpelier over the Montpelier and Wells River railroad, but I had forgotten the exact time the train left Montpelier.

I became nervous while waiting at Northfield and asked the ticket agent if he had a time table over the Montpelier and Wells River railroad. He replied that he had not, that he did not believe they ever issued such a thing, at least he had never seen one. A gentleman in the waiting room, however, told me that he thought this train left about 5 o'clock, and so I felt I had plenty of time.

I reached Montpelier at a few minutes before 5 and hastened to the Montpelier and Wells River railroad station, leaving a gentleman who had come from Northfield with me on the way. On reaching the station I found that the only train which would run to Wells River had left at 4:10. It was now 5 o'clock, and the next half hour was as hard a thirty minutes as I ever had in my life. Three courses were open to me: The first was to telephone or telegraph my condition to Lisbon and remain over Sunday at Montpelier; the second was to take the evening train for White River Junction, Vt., the night train from there to Wells River and the Sunday morning train to Lisbon.

There were objections to these two courses. To the first, that if I remained in Montpelier over Sunday, my pulpit would be vacant at Lisbon, and it was my last Sunday, and I especially desired to be there. Should I on my last Sunday desert my church? Should a pastor who had always urged the duty of church attendance upon his people, be found wanting on his last Sunday when there was a way for him to be present? I hence dismissed this first course as untenable.

There was the objection to both first and second courses that while I had mileage on both the Montpelier and Wells River and Boston and Maine railroads, I did not have money enough with me to spend Sunday in Montpelier or to buy a ticket to White River Junction or the Central Vermont; neither did I have any friends in Montpelier of whom I could borrow. There was, however, a third course open to me, namely, to walk the thirty-eight miles to Wells River and take the Sunday morning train to Lisbon.

By this means I would have to borrow no money, I would keep my appointment in Lisbon on my last Sunday. In thirty minutes I had decided this was the thing to do, and at 5:30 o'clock, having purchased two cakes of sweetened chocolate, I set out on my tramp to Wells River. The railroad, as those who are acquainted with this section of the country know, makes its way to Plainfield and Marshfield, a distance of about fifteen miles, along a distance of about fifteen miles to one side. Then it plunges into a wild tract of uninhabited timber land, where most of the large trees have been cut, then passes by several ponds, thus for about thirteen miles. I should say, the way is very lonely. In one place only, is the loneliness relieved by a mill and the several houses of a lumber camp.

Then from Groton through South Ryegate for about ten miles you pass again through a settled country. I met a few men for the first two or three miles walking on the track toward Montpelier, but very soon my walk was a solitary one.

For nineteen miles, until I came to the post beside the railroad that showed that I was half way between Montpelier and Wells River, I walked without once stopping to rest. After this I stopped every two or three miles, sitting down on the stones at the base on the mile stones and leaning against the mile stones to rest. At one point, after having passed the nineteenth mile post, I thought I heard a man whistle in the woods, and thinking a hunter might be out, and not wishing to be mistaken for some animal and shot, I hastened on at a lively rate for a few miles.

I passed the lumber camp and heard two men who were at work in the mill talking together. In passing the ponds there were frequent streams of water passing under the track, and as I was very thirsty the sound of the water was very tantalizing.

Finally I got down and drank from a little stream. At Groton, being rather weary and foot sore from walking on the track, I passed down through the streets of the sleeping village and along the road for about two miles.

But not knowing the country and fearing I might lose my way, I again took to the railroad track. The night was partly cloudy. Twice the clouds thickened and it seemed on the point of raining. But then they were blown away and the moon would shine. The last part of the way the tracks cross and recross the river many times, and it was quite dark in the first part of the bridges, and in one bridge the sound of the water seemed, for an instant, to be the conversation of human beings.

I should say about six or seven miles from Wells River I saw an object coming down the track at a very rapid rate. When it came nearer it took on the form of a man. He kept the middle of the track, and I took the outside. He said "good morning," I said "how do you do?" and then we went on our way. I reached Wells River at 5:15 o'clock Sunday morning, having made the thirty-eight miles in eleven hours and forty-five minutes. I crossed over to Woodsville and got a lunch as soon as the hotels opened and arrived on the train at Lisbon at 8 o'clock.

I have experienced no ill results from this walk and feel that, if placed in the same circumstances again, I should do the same thing. I fail to see anything very remarkable about my course of action or the walk, but simply regard it as duty performed.

HIGH DECORATIONS FOR LAW ADVISED DENISON

Report That Mikado Will Signally Honor American Who Has Long Served the Nation.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 12.—H. V. Denison, the American legal adviser of the Japanese war office, is to receive high decoration from the Emperor for his services at the Portsmouth peace conference, says Shaw T. Nishimura, on his way from Tokyo to Montreal, where he represented the Japanese Central Tea Traders' Association.

ROOT REFUSES TO ACT.

Would Leave Santo Domingo Case in Present Hands.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.—Prof. J. H. Hollander is anxious that the conduct of the financial affairs of the republic of Santo Domingo be taken from the bureau of insular affairs of the war department and turned over to the state department. He won the president over to his scheme, but Secretary Root has refused to have anything to do with the matter.

Mr. Root says he is ready for any diplomatic business, but will have nothing to do with the present arrangement between the United States and Santo Domingo. He believes the bureau of insular affairs is the best fitted for the work.

When Secretary Hay declined to assume charge of the isthmian canal he said the bureau of insular affairs should look after it. In consequence the bureau has been drained of many of its best men, the first draft going to the Panama canal and the second to Santo Domingo.

Although these men are nominally under the control of the Dominican government, as a matter of fact, they are employees of this government on leave of absence, and, as such, they consult with and follow the advice given by the war department.

NAMED OFFICERS.

Await Ratification at the Meeting of Bankers.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.—The following officers have been named by the nominating committee of the American Bankers' association.

The other vice presidents named include Charles G. Allen, Maine; Edward Wells, Burlington, Vt.; ex-Governor Chamberlain, Meriden, Ct.; Edward F. Metcalf, Providence, R. I.; and H. M. Batchelder, Salem, Mass.

SCOTCH BANKS A MODEL.

One-Pound-Note System Lauded at the Washington Convention.

Washington, Oct. 12.—Robert Blyth, general manager of the Union Bank of Scotland, was an interesting speaker yesterday before the American Bankers' association.

The chief characteristic of the Scotch system is the right of the banks to issue the one-pound-note, as the result of which Scotland retains today her paper currency, while the reverse is true in England.

Another distinctive feature of the Scotch system is its cash credit account, wherein a trader or manufacturer is enabled to borrow from the banks temporarily by executing a bond to which he gets the signature of two or more friends along with his own. The bank accepts the bonds and honors checks up to the amount named in it, obviating the pledging of securities.

PRESIDENT APPLAUDS.

Surprises Banker, Father of Eight Children.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 12.—While the president was receiving the members of the American Bankers' Association Wednesday, a tall and dignified gentleman, closely followed by his wife and eight children, graded in height like stairs, approached the president. He gave his name as P. B. Oliver, and San Francisco as his home, and added: "And this is Mrs. Oliver, and these are my eight children."

"Your eight children!" exclaimed the president, "And you a banker?" He advanced a step and raised his left hand, the right all the while warmly shaking that of the father of the eight. "I propose three cheers for Mr. and Mrs. Oliver," cried the president, and himself led in the three hurrahs by the throng.

Mr. Oliver was a little surprised, but when he realized the compliment intended he took it in good part.

DELCASSE IS SILENT

Refuses to Explain Morocco "Disclosures."

CHARGES ARE RIDICULOUS

Germans Are Irritated by Matin's Reports—London Said to Have Given Verbal Assurances to Berlin.

Paris, Oct. 12.—M. Delcasse, former Foreign Minister, addresses a letter to the Figaro regarding the recent alleged disclosures of diplomatic secrets in which it was charged that France and Great Britain had entered into a compact to take joint action against Germany over the Moroccan affair. M. Delcasse says:

"Since I left the Foreign Office I have systematically maintained silence, not only as to the insults heaped upon me, but also regarding the impertinent travesty of my intentions and acts. The French patriotism of a foreign newspaper is violently shocked over the revelation of a diplomatic secret which is attributed to me. I should regard the accusation as merely ridiculous but for the fact that the Figaro, occupying a leading position, reproduces it and, therefore, shows the amount of anxiety it has caused. However, while I should like to allay this anxiety, I am no longer in a position to make an official declaration, and therefore ask to be excused."

DISCLOSURES ANNOY BERLIN.

The Matin's Revelations of British Offers to Aid France Stir Germany.

Berlin, Oct. 12.—Although no positive official declarations have been made on the subject of the Paris Matin's disclosures of what took place immediately before the retirement of M. Delcasse from the ministry of foreign affairs, inspired paragraphs indicate that these disclosures have produced a most unpleasant effect among the members of the German government.

The manner in which the statements attributed to M. Delcasse were received in England is far from satisfactory, and their prompt repudiation in an informal manner by the British government is what the German government desires. It is expected that when questioned on the subject the British government will deny in parliament the Matin's specific utterances in regard to British offers of military aid.

The British government, it is learned, gave Germany satisfactory assurances last June that no offensive or defensive alliance existed between Great Britain and France. The one thing obvious to the German public is that hope of political co-operation between Germany and France must for the time be given up.

KOREA IN DANGER.

Japanese Anxious to Get All Power Into Their Hands.

Seoul, Oct. 12.—Japanese Minister Hayashi started for Tokyo yesterday for the purpose of consulting the government and elder statesmen. Minister Hayashi recently commended the declaration of a Japanese protectorate over Korea as the only means of making effectual Japanese projects in Korea.

It is probable that the coming conference will definitely decide the political status of Korea. The Japanese are anxious to obtain a hold on affairs before the return of representatives of Russia, and the impending conference, together with the absence of British and Italian ministers on a vacation, encourage local Japanese to believe that eventually all the foreign legations will be withdrawn from Seoul and that the diplomatic business of Korea will be handled in Tokio.

The Emperor and court officials are much worried over the present turn of affairs, more especially as they cling to their national representation abroad and to the residence of foreign ministers at Seoul as the last vestige of their vanishing independence.

WILL FIGHT TO FINISH.

Hottentots Send Defiance to Germans in South Africa.

Cape Town, Oct. 12.—Morenga and Morris, chiefs of the rebellious Hottentots of German Southwest Africa, have captured Jerusalem Camp, between Warmbad and Souti drift, after severe fighting during which Lieut. Surmand and five men were killed and eight men were wounded. The Hottentots sustained no losses and captured all the stock and stores.

Several Germans were made prisoners, but after being disarmed were allowed to return to Lieutenant General Von Trotha, commander of the German forces, with a letter from Morenga saying that the Hottentots were now in a position to take the offensive, and would fight to the finish.

The German garrison at Khiplaats, hearing that Morenga was in their vicinity, burned their stores, deserted the post, and retired to Desandendun. The garrison at Kkaas has been strengthened by 900 men and a battery of artillery.

BRITISH WARSHIP ASHORE.

The Assistance Aground in Tetuan Bay, Morocco—Situation Critical.

Gibraltar, Oct. 12.—The British repair ship Assistance is ashore in Tetuan Bay, Morocco. Warships, steamers and lighters have gone from here to her aid. A heavy gale endangers the position of the vessel.

The Assistance is a single screw vessel of 2,600 tons displacement and 3,000 indicated horsepower. She was built in 1901, is 436 feet long, has 53 feet beam, and draws 20 feet of water. She is fitted with a foundry, machine tools, etc., carries a crew of 262 men, and mounts ten 3-pounder quick-firing guns.

Woman's Kidney Troubles

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Especially Successful in Curing This Fatal Disease.

Mrs. J. W. Lang and Mrs. S. Frake

Of all the diseases known, with which women are afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless early and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Mrs. Pinkham, early in her career, gave exhaustive study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for woman's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—was careful to see that it contained the correct combination of herbs which was sure to control that fatal disease, woman's kidney troubles. The Vegetable Compound acts in harmony with the laws that govern the entire female system, and while there are many so called remedies for kidney troubles, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only one especially prepared for women, and thousands have been cured of serious kidney derangements by it. Derangements of the feminine organs quickly affect the kidneys, and when a woman has such symptoms as pain or weight in the loins, backache, bearing down pains, urine too frequent, scanty or high colored, producing scalding or burning, or deposits like brick dust in it; unusual thirst, swelling of hands and feet, swelling under the eyes or sharp pains in the back running down the inside of her groin, she may be sure her kidneys are affected and should lose no time in combating the disease with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the woman's remedy for woman's ills.

The following letters show how marvelously successful it is.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound: a Woman's Remedy for Woman's ills.

Mrs. Samuel Frake, of Prospect Plains, N. J., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I cannot thank you enough for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. When I first wrote to you I had suffered for years with what the doctor called kidney trouble and congestion of the womb. My back ached dreadfully all the time, and I suffered so with that bearing-down feeling I could hardly walk across the room. I did not get any better, so decided to stop doctoring with my physician and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am thankful to say it has entirely cured me. I do all my own work, have no more backache and all the bad symptoms have disappeared. I cannot praise your medicine enough, and would advise all women suffering with kidney trouble to try it.

Mrs. J. W. Lang, of 626 Third Avenue, New York, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I have been a great sufferer with kidney trouble. My back ached all the time and I was discouraged. I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was a kidney disease, and I began to take it; and it has cured me when everything else had failed. I have recommended it to lots of people and they all praise it very highly.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation.

Women suffering from kidney trouble, or any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Out of the great volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than likely she has the very knowledge that will help your case. Her advice is free and always helpful.

MONEY NOT FORTHCOMING.

I. N. Chase of Brandon Is Looking for a $5,000 Purse Won in Milwaukee.

I. N. Chase of Brandon, whose horse, Advancer, recently won a $5,000 purse in Milwaukee, has received no money from the officials in that city. This action has aroused a great deal of interest among horsemen in this State and throughout the country. The horse publications have remarked on the matter and all seem to think that Mr. Chase is justly entitled to his money and that the official's action in Milwaukee is unlawful. H. C. Potter of Middlebury saw Advancer race in Milwaukee and also went to Libertyville, Ill., where the horse started and won his race.

Advancer was without any record this season until he started in August at Nashua, N. H., and won his first race. The following week he started at Dover, N. H., and won, and the next week at Rochester, N. H., he started and won again. He then went to Middlebury and won two races, one in the 2.25 class and one in the 2.35 class. Mr. Chase not only owns the sire and dam of Advancer but also owns three full sisters.

Road Commissioner Mad.

Bennington is wondering whether ex-street commissioner, M. N. Clapp, who has been "let" since Monday night, will restore the papers he destroyed or stand suit by the village attorney. At Monday night's meeting of the village trustees the office of street commissioner was abolished for the stated reason that funds for that purpose were at a low ebb. Clapp, who was present at the meeting, resented his deposition from office and tore some important papers relative to the State highway fund. A motion was at once passed that the village attorney interview Mr. Clapp and request him to make good the damaged papers and upon his refusal to bring proceedings against him.
